ISSUE No. 26 — SPRING 2026

The story has to come first.

Belinda Lanks is an editor, content strategist, and writer in Brooklyn — shaping editorial systems for design-forward brands and writing about culture, design, and the lives we build inside.

FEATURED CASE

Building Samsung Explore into an award-winning lifestyle publication.

As editor-in-chief at Razorfish, I led the editorial vision for Explore — a branded magazine designed to help readers elevate their passions with tech, not be sold to by it. Won industry recognition; became a model for what brand journalism can be when the words come first.

Cover treatment — kicker, big italic serif headline, byline as deck. Reads like an issue cover, not a personal site.

cover plate stays prominent — image content should be centered

Featured case study with drop cap. The page itself demonstrates "editorial strategy."

3-col entry grid → 1-col stack on phone

3-up entry grid. Italic role tag, serif title, prose description. No card chrome — top-rule only.

2-col masthead becomes 1-col, italics still alternate

Typographic client list — no logos. Alternating italic/roman, like a magazine masthead.
